Dave Langfries
"The Outdoor Insider"

Well, when the salmon seasons are closed this summer, spiny ray fishing is a great alternative. Banks Lake is always worth a try for walleye, and Pot-holes is producing good catches of big crappie. So, never mind the smoke, get out and have some fun.

You have to give us some credit for perseverance, my fishing buddy Dennis Beich and I have had some very tough days on Banks Lake fishing for walleye. I suppose it's the memories of very good days of filling the live well keeps us going. This year it has been disappointing. We are fishing our usual hot spots without success. We usually start on Barker Flats, where walleye marks are marching across the screen on the Garmin fish finders, and it is typically good for several fish. Not so much this year. We also try the Clay Banks and sometimes make a pass through Poplar Bay. That Wednesday we hardly marked any fish. Then we will finish our day on off the Million Dollar Mile. This is where Dennis landed a couple of nice keepers. I am sure that Dave Junker, who joined us on our trip, was impressed with our efforts, as meager as they were. I had fun playing with some of the new features on the Thunder Jet Luxor while we zoomed around looking for fish. I think we were the only boat fishing for walleye, probably due to the smoke. We'll try it again in September. This week's photo is of Dennis with one of the walleye he landed.

My wife Eileen wanted to go fishing, with some conditions. She didn't want to troll around and pick up a rod when a fish was on the line or watch me fiddle with the new Garmin electronics on the Mark's Marine Thunder Jet or do a video on something like the Minn Kota bow mount. She wanted to cast and hook fish with the rod in her hand. That's the kind of fishing she wanted to do. She was even willing to leave the house at the ungodly hour of 5 a.m. I gave this some thought and decided that a trip to Potholes Reservoir was just the ticket. Something Eileen has always enjoyed is bobber and jig fishing for steelhead. So, I rigged up a couple of rods with bobbers, just like we do when we're steelhead fishing, but this time crappie would be the target species. I have caught crappie on Potholes while trolling for walleye but have never really gone there with the intent of catching a bunch of them. This should satisfy her need to watch a bobber go down and hook some fish, and both of us should have a lot of fun doing it. I even threw in a couple of bass rods, and we might spend some time doing that, too.

I am very eager to fish for kokanee on Lake Coeur d'Alene again. It doesn't take many of them to fill a freezer when they are as long as 17 inches. I had a great morning with Tony Johnson, who does boat deliveries for Mark's Marine in his spare time. I think I will put my new Thunder Jet Luxor in the water at Sun Up Bay. We didn't have to go far from there to get into good numbers of kokanee that day. We just ran out to the channel where Bell Bay Park was to the north of us. Tony also owns a Thunder Jet of a similar model to the one I am driving, and we can compare features while we are fishing. I checked with Jeff at Fins and Feathers over there. I have been visiting the shop and talking to those guys for many years, and they have always been very helpful. Jeff mentioned that he has been doing some fishing for northern pike, and although this isn't prime time, they are still biting. He mentioned that he has caught fish in Rockford Bay, which is just up the lake from Sun Up.

More sockeye are swimming up the lower Yakima River. That's after heavy machinery removed an earthen land bridge in the Tri-Cities that blocked the river's flow. It's been about six months since excavators scooped out the dirt and rock that made up the Bateman Island Causeway. Now that the water is no longer blocked, biologists said they've seen an increase in sockeye salmon in the lower Yakima – nearly 400 sockeye according to Zac Zacavish, a research biologist with the Yakama Nation. He said it's likely the highest percentage they've seen since the Yakama Nation first released sockeye for its reintroduction program in 2009. Biologists want sockeye to move quickly during the hot months of June and July. That's when most of this sockeye run made it to the mouth of the Yakima River. In addition, he said, a cool spell a couple of weeks ago helped cool water temperatures. So did the smoke, which decreases solar radiation. The Lower Yakima River is a huge bottleneck for smolt survival and adults coming up with the thermal block that sets up. So, a lot of effort over the last few years and into the future is going to actually be on the lower river projects," he said.

The Buoy 10 Chinook fishery is winding down, and the action has been great. The fun isn't over for anglers on the lower Columbia River. The coho fishing has been better than expected and fishing for them in the main stem Columbia will keep anglers busy for months. There are over 350 thousand coho expected to enter the Columbia River. Anglers will be shifting their destinations to pursue these prized fish as the coho make their way up the river. One of the most popular coho fishing areas that I have experienced was off the mouth of the Klickitat River. The fishing here will start as early as mid-September and peaks in October, and there are coho anglers that will keep at it until the end of the season in December. In our area, I have fished for them below Wanapum Dam from the shore, without success, but it's all about timing. When there is a good burst of fish moving up the Columbia it is possible to get bright coho below the dam.

Other main event winners in the multi-class show were Colin Newton (West Kelowna, BC) in CAMRA; Rusty Webb (Spokane Valley) in Hobby Stocks; Cameron Davis (Spokane) in V-6 Claimers; KC Garber (Spokane) Fever 4's and Luke Warner (Spokane) in Roadrunners.

NORTHWEST CLASSIC DRAG EVENT COMING SEPT. 9-12 QLISPE RACEWAY IS ALSO HOME FOR CANADA VS. USA 'BORDER BATTLE'

Spokane's Justin Jones will drive for Team USA vs. Team Canada in the Sept. 9 Border Battle, part of the inaugural Northwest Classic which runs Sept. 9-12 at Qlispe Raceway in Airway Heights. Justin Jones photo

AIRWAY HEIGHTS — Decades ago the biggest names in drag racing made once yearly visits to Spokane Raceway Park every summer.

Sporting colorful nicknames like "Big Daddy" Don Garlits, Don "The Snake" Prudhomme, Tom "The Mongoose" McEwan or John "Brute" Force to name a few, they thrilled fans who packed the track's on-top-of-the-action grandstands with ear-drum splitting noise.

While those days are now ancient history, there's an effort in the works to bring some of that excitement back when the first annual Northwest Classic visits the Kalispel Tribe's Qlispe Raceway Sept. 9-12.

Drawing everyday sportsman racers from across the West, as far away as Arizona, the four-day event offers races that each day pay out big time.

Opening day on Wednesday, Sept. 9 features a special All-Star race called the "Border Battle" where teams of 16 racers each from the United States and Canada battle for bracing rights and a $12,000 top prize and $5,000 for runner up.

Spokane's Justin Jones is one of the locals chosen to race for Team USA and is duly proud to play his part.

"It is obviously quite the privilege because they picked out the best 16 from our area," Jones said. "So it's a quite a big honor to be on this team."

On subsequent days starting Thursday and concluding Saturday, a $10,000 prize goes to the Super Pro victors with $5,000 to whomever wins the Pro Class.

Sportsman drag racers compete in classes using a handicap or bracket-style starting system designed to equalize competition across varying vehicle.

This inaugural race is the work of a team of notable event promoters for sportsman racers, Jim Hughes and Chris Forsyth out of Tucson, Arizona.

It is patterned to some degree out of the exceptionally successful the West Coast Bracket Races (WCBR) organization and the newest addition.

The WCBR was started by Forsyth in 2015 at the Hughes-owned Tucson Dragway.

Hughes is best known as the founder of Hughes Performance nearly a half century ago. He sold the family business in 2015, bought the Tucson racetrack and built a successful sportsman racing program.

He was approached by Qlispe officials to assist that track in building its own sportsman program.

"How do we build better bracket racing up in the Northwest?" Hughes was asked.

Hughes is also a widely decorated sportsman drag racer with two NHRA world titles and 10 national event victories. He was named to the prestigious NHRA's Top 50 Sportsman Racers List in 2026.

Forsyth is also a dedicated racer who most recently drove to a runner-up finish in the Super Comp final round at the 2026 NHRA Lucas Oil Drag Racing Series event at Pomona Dragstrip.

He crafted the Southwest Showdown at Tucson offering $15,000 to win at an event that drew over 400 race cars.

Putting together a companion race to the Showdown in Tucson in the PNW is being done both as an experiment and a tribute, Forsyth said on noted drag racing podcaster, Troy Abercomb from Woodburn, Oregon.

Forsyth's success in the Southwest has a lot to do with support from Northwest that has grown "exponentially every year as they come down."

"This is a prime opportunity for me to reciprocate the appreciation for the racers that have come and traveled down," Forsyth said.

With the NW Classic being run the week following the NHRA Division 6 ET Finals, there will be a significant contingent of racers already in town, making chances of a success much greater. The event could attract several hundred race teams.
